Antoinette Brown Blackwell 1825 - 1921

On May 20, 1825, Antoinette Louisa Brown was born in a log cabin in Henrietta, New York. She was the seventh child in a family of ten. When she was five, her family moved to a larger stone farmhouse on Pinnacle Road which is on the National Register of Historic Places.

At the age of fifteen she graduated from the Monroe Academy, the first secondary school in the county. She was subsequently asked to serve as a school teacher of young children. Teaching, however, did not appeal to Antoinette as a career, even though it provided her with the money she needed to attend college.

In 1846 she began studying for a literary degree at Oberlin College. Her desire was to become a minister. She completed theological studies at Oberlin but the college would not give her a preaching certificate because she was a woman. Eventually hired as a pastor by the Congregational Church in South Butler, she was ordained on September 15, 1853 and became the first woman in the country to receive this honor.

During the time she was waiting to be called as a minister, "Nette" became part of the circuit lecture tour. Individuals were hired to speak on the topics of the day: abolition, temperance and woman's suffrage to name a few, and they traveled from town to town presenting their speeches. (Today this might remind us of a band on tour.) She was recognized as an intelligent and accomplished speaker.

In 1856, Antoinette married Samuel Blackwell in her family home on Pinnacle Road. Antoinette continued speaking and writing throughout her marriage and published several books. Her husband supported her endeavors by helping to care for their children. She and Samuel had seven children, five of whom survived to adulthood.

At the age of 96, she was the only one of her suffragist friends who voted in the Presidential Election on November, 2, 1920.
